

BALI TRADITIONAL TOUR

Pasar of Banjar - Market: A “pasar” is a traditional market where you can find a great variety of daily needs, groceries, various exotic fruits and spices, and also offerings. Air Panas - Hot Spring: The sulphur hot spring of Banjar has a public bathing area with changing rooms and a restaurant. The average water temperature is about 370 °C, and its sulphur content is known to be therapeutic. Brahma-Asrama Vihara: This Buddhist temple monastery founded in 1958 by one of Bali’s few Buddhist monks, the late Bhikku Giri Rakhita, is set into a hillside a few miles inland from Banjar and offers spectacular view over the valley. Inside the temple, you can see a miniature of UNESCO World Heritage Site Candi Borobudur - the biggest Buddhist temple in Indonesia, situated in central Java near the city of Yogyakarta. Visitors can participate in a meditation session called Vipassana, which focuses on breathing and mental peacefulness. Village of Pedawa: Pedawa is a “Bali Age - older village” the inhabitants claim them selves as “old Balinese”. Here palm sugar, called gula sari, is still produced traditional style: several slits are made into the bud of a coconut tree and the sap is collected, to be boiled until it thickens. This thickened substance is poured into bamboo tubes between 3-5 inches in length , and left to solidify to form cylindrical cake blocks. Munduk: The traditional way of processing coffee is to allow freshly handpicked beans to be laid out to dry in the sun. After up to two weeks the outer shells turn dark brown and brittle. The beans are pounded by hand to remove the dried husks. They are then kept in a warehouse for at least a year to allow time for maturing. The villagers of Munduk still use traditional methods to produce their own powdered coffee. Bali coffee is famous because the coffee beans do not lose their unique aroma during the process.
